“Aging is like enlightenment at gunpoint.” Anna Halprin

For the last seven decades, Anna Halprin, the legendary American dance pioneer, has redefined our notions of modern art by such revolutionary experimentation in theater and performance that she has entered into our cultural consciousness. This film follows Anna from her establishment of the first multiracial dance company in the U.S. and her controversial use of nudity in dance performances, through her spectacular tours in Europe, her long withdrawal from the stage due to cancer, and her triumphant sold-out performance return at the Joyce Theatre in New York at age 80. Famous as an early pioneer in the expressive arts healing movement, she has led, and continues to lead, countless dance programs with the elderly and cancer and AIDS patients, long committed to a belief in the connection between movement and the healing power of dance.
